Leading Congregations into a Multiracial, Multicultural Future:

now is the time!

In Tulsa, Oklahoma

We are called to honor and attend to the challenges of nurturing multiracial, multicultural Unitarian Universalist congregations. But how do we approach and embrace multiculturalism? How do we learn to see and challenge the ways in which white culture and privilege define our community? How do we lead into this different future from where we are now? How do we create and sustain congregations that are truly welcoming and inclusive? What compels us?

Join us in Tulsa for our third Multiracial, Multicultural conference for a dynamic, meaningful, and informative program on Friday and Saturday. We have selected Tulsa for the diversity of congregations in the city and because we are partnering with the Unitarian Universalist Congregation of Tahlequah and joining them for worship on Sunday morning. Native peoples and cultures flow through Tahlequah, capital of the Cherokee Nation, and the UU Congregation there.

With keynote speaker L. Lee Knepelkamp, PhD - Professor of Psychology and Education in the Program of Social-Organizational Psychology, Teachers College Columbia University. A National Scholar and award winning teacher, Dr. Knepelkamp has written widely on intellectual and identity development, intercultural issues on campus, and moral and ethical development in the context of race, ethnicity, and sexual orientation. Included in her scholarly interests are intercultural communications, the multicultural self and diversity in organizations.

LISTEN, LEARN, LEAD
